Canadian rock band See Spot Run will make a return to Sarnia Bayfest, opening for Our Lady Peace and Stone Temple Pilots on July 11.

"Sarnia has always held a special place in our hearts so we're thrilled to be returning this year," said lead singer Chris Brodbeck.

The Toronto-based group -- which includes guitarist Randy Bowen and Drummer Dave Fudge and guitarist Aaron Little -- was hand-picked by members of Stone Temple Pilots, through Sonicbids, an online booking agency that allows bands to submit an electronic application to play at Rogers Bayfest.

This summer will mark their second appearance at the summer music festival.

Last year, the band was selected as a special guest for Bon Jovi.

"We're very excited to be adding See Spot Run to our Saturday lineup," said Michele Stokley, Bayfest organizer.

"It is not often that we have the same band selected twice by one of the headlining acts; it shows the determination this band has at furthering their career."

Originating out of Montreal, See Spot Run's third album made Canadian recording history with its titled track "Weightless", as the highest charted independent song on the rock chart.

The single, reached the number five spot on the All Canadian charts and the song translated "D coller" reached the number one spot in Quebec.
